Apoptosis is a key regulator of development and the maintenance of tissue homeostasis in both the nervous and immune systems. It is also involved in the pathogenesis of various neurodegenerative diseases including Alzheimer's and Parkinson's. Thus, abnormal apoptosis is likely to play an important role in the development of these disorders. The past few years have seen a substantial increase in the understanding of the biochemical and molecular mechanisms of apoptosis and in the characterization of novel cellular proteins that regulate apoptosis and may have key regulatory roles in the death machinery. In this regard, we have found that multiple MAP kinases, including the c-Jun NH₂-terminal kinases (JNKs) are intimately involved in the induction of neuronal apoptosis as well as in the initiation of the apoptotic cascade. In addition, we have determined that caspase-8, the apoptotic protease, is activated prior to cell death in a JNK-dependent manner in apoptotic neurons. The specific aims of this proposal are to: 1. Elucidate the molecular mechanisms and biochemical nature of the JNK/caspase-8 pathway in inducing apoptosis; 2. Characterize the developmental regulation and spatial-temporal dynamics of the JNK/caspase-8 pathway in the developing brain; 3. Characterize the regulation and role of JNKs in the initiation and propagation of apoptosis in the developing and adult nervous system. To accomplish these aims, we will utilize molecular, biochemical, anatomical and immunocytochemical methods. Data generated from the proposed experiments will provide important information on the molecular and cellular mechanisms of neuronal apoptosis and may facilitate the discovery of novel therapeutic approaches to neurodegenerative disorders. Structural, electronic, thermodynamic, and magnetic study of [H₂Pt(4)Cl₈]²⁻ and [H₂Pt(4)Cl₁₀]²⁻ clusters in different solvents. It is a great interest to synthesize the clusters containing metal atoms with redox properties in supramolecular chemistry and materials science because of their potential use in molecular electronic devices and chemical catalysis. Here, we report a detailed structural, electronic, thermodynamic, and magnetic characterization of [H₂Pt(4)Cl₈]²⁻ and [H₂Pt(4)Cl₁₀]²⁻ clusters in the different solvents, i.e., CH₃CN, CH₃OH, and CD₂Cl₂. The results show that both
