Quercetin supplementation reduces isoproterenol-induced mast cell degranulation in mice. We have investigated the effects of quercetin, a natural bioflavonoid, on mast cell degranulation induced by isoproterenol in mice. Mice that had received isoproterenol (100 mg/kg body weight) twice a week for 6 weeks showed increased mast cell degranulation in cardiac tissues, and the platelet-activating factor (PAF) level in the serum. On the other hand, isoproterenol-treated mice that had received quercetin (50 mg/kg body weight) daily for 2 weeks showed a significant reduction in the level of mast cell degranulation and the PAF level in the serum. Furthermore, quercetin abolished the increase in the levels of thromboxane A2 and the decrease in the levels of prostaglandin E2 in the heart tissue. These results suggest that quercetin may have the therapeutic potential against inflammatory diseases and cardiac disorders, including myocardial ischemia, due to its inhibitory activity against mast cell degranulation. Virtual reality is now more than just a gaming gimmick and at NVIDIA we are pursuing VR to be much more than just another consumer toy. We are actively chasing the social, lifelike experience. VR will extend our reach beyond the desktop and into a broader area of human interaction. We see this as a critical milestone in the history of computing and in the communities future in general. VR is about sharing a real world that we can influence with the people around us. It is about disconnecting from reality and bridging the gap between the virtual and the real. Most importantly, VR is about making the experience, the out-of-this-world experience, available to everyone in the world.

Insulin resistance and cardiovascular end points: assessing and ignoring. The prevalence of insulin resistance is estimated to range from 40 to 80% of the adult population in the developed world. Whether this has an impact on cardiovascular risk is not clear. The majority of the population with insulin resistance are diagnosed by a wide array of surrogate markers rather than glucose intolerance. The relationship between insulin resistance and heart disease is not well defined. A better understanding of the relationship between insulin resistance, cardiovascular disease and events is needed. Clearly the prevalence of insulin resistance is high,
