ultimate goal of Tearaway is to create what we feel would be really cool in real life. We want to be able to take the toys we have at home and let them express how they think, move, and feel, what they want to do, what makes them happy. All of these ideas came from our imagination and were only made possible by the creativity of the makers! CUSTOMIZATION

Tearaway has two parts: A world which the player explores, and a set of tools and objects called Makers that the player manipulates using the system of Tearaway. With Makers, the player can create their own items, projects, and side quests. Each player can only use Makers they have discovered, because they have their own way of using them. Making a Maker requires a special object called an Orb, which is a special piece that can be found in the land of Tearaway. An Orb is required to write code and can be found in Tearaway. MAKING IN TEARAWAY When using an Orb in real life, the player is surrounded by a variety of complex and beautiful patterns. Through exploration, the player will develop ways to interact with these patterns.

Q: How to dispose of old work? My wife has been looking for a new job for quite some time. She has several current applications to submit, but recently they have been all saying, "Thank you for your interest in our organization, but we are not hiring at this time." I know that the current state of the job market will often reverse itself, but we have been through this many times before. I've been gradually decreasing my work hours, hoping we would eventually reach our hiring goal. How can I dispose of the current applications in a way that doesn't sound rude? A: I'm in a similar situation. My wife (a school teacher and mom) has been looking for a job for several months and has now run out of things to do to apply for new ones. What I do is to go through each application (skipping the ones I know the application company has rejected) and say it's the last attempt. I want to emphasize that I do not mean it is the last time you apply for the position. It's the last time anyone in the organization (recruitment, HR, etc.) will hear from you. I'm not sure how you might dispose of the application, except by manually filing them away

(which I have done). As I noted in a comment, I also find it useful to prepare lists
