a map and menu, allowing for fast navigation between cities. Although you can edit individual properties or their values, the first focus is on managing overall population growth. Population centers can be built and their borders expanded to find natural resources, and, subsequently, wealth. Creating city buildings Each building is represented by a rectangular container. In the 1.0 edition, there are many building types to construct, including industry, residential, public, and religious buildings. Specific property types can be targeted by extending the borders of existing buildings, adding additional building types, and selecting target buildings. When a building is selected, its target property can be dragged around the map, allowing for construction. Expanding borders As buildings are constructed, you will receive wealth, and thus you can expand the city's borders to generate more resources. Every city has a wealth level, with some cities reaching over a trillion resources. To-D-To distribution To-D-To currently runs as a stand-alone Java application, and is not currently available for download.
